JOHN IRON - THE MARINE KILLING MACHINE

Master Marine Commander : John, in our lab deep down under the great salt lake, we had a biological accident. The Alphapoint valley was affected, all citizens have been evacuated. But the area is contaminated, some creatures mutated very fast....Well, John, we have now a monster spider problem. We will send you to Alphapoint 5, clean that area. You're our best man! We count on you!

John Iron : I am the marine killing machine, not an insect exterminator! I need a real mission, not such boring Army jobs. Killing spiders is something for the Duke or the Doomguy, they are sissy guys, I'm doing the real hard bad ass shit. Spiders....

Master Marine Commander : Good luck John.

Are you brave enough, to fight against the evil monster spiders?
They will attack you from everywhere, they don't know the word mercy.

Features:

- old school top-down action
- good soundtrack
- a powerful shotgun
- angry spiders
- non stop action
- explore the levels

Game currently blackscreens upon startup. Would not recommend buying this game until problems are patched. Seems to be a recent trend with Arcsys releases (see BBCF launch).. "This dungeon is pretty easy. Yeah, not even any traps. Whack!" LOL. It is a bit expensive for what it is, but it is still in development. That being said, if you want the best looking and most configurable stream remote you can get on a mobile device and are willing to pay for it, look no further. It can even do basic controls for streamlabs and Twitch, besides full controls for OBS and system commands. How you set it up is almost completely open ended, which is good.. Before you buy Draugen, you should know what it is: not so much an adventure or puzzle game as a linear short story that unfolds from a first-person perspective. The game is characterized as "fjord noir", and that's about right: it's a psychological mystery set in an isolated Norwegian village.

It's a beautiful setting, beautifully rendered. The story is understated, relying mainly on atmosphere and gradual revelation through found objects to keep the player engaged . . . with a few more dramatic moments along the way.

A highlight is Lissie, the protagonist's traveling companion. It is in conversations with her that Edward, the protagonist, works through and makes sense of the clues he discovers. She's a lively and intelligent teen, whose back-talk to Edward is consistently entertaining.

It took me about two hours to play through the whole story. I was more or less satisfied with the way it all resolved, but I still might have wished for more - in two different ways.

On the down side, I do wish the story had a little more substance to it; some of the clues could have been more convoluted, for example, and the psychological elements could have been more fully developed.

On the up side, I came away intrigued by the dynamic between Edward and Lissie, and I would like to have spent more time in their company. And that, I think, is the greatest strength of the game.. To the Moon is an RPG Maker phenomenon made by Freebird Games. The game tells the story of two scientists and their job, which is to grant an old man his final wish in his mind before he passes away. And on the journey, the two scientists learn about the story of his past, and what he has gone through. Simple as it may seem, this game is one hell of a trip. It perfectly utilizes perfectly both dialogue and music to make the player feel engrossed in the game, and make the characters all the more worth exploring. The story, while quite simple, was extremely enjoyable. It's emotional and funny, where it needs to be to keep the player interested in the game itself. The game handled those little emotional moments quite well, too, with interactions that feel very natural, rather than just a script. The soundtracks of the game also further support these moments, with incredible piano pieces to accompany every scene.

CONCLUSION: To the Moon is an emotional journey down memory lane. (Ba-dum, tss) If you want to have some gameplay, then it probably won't be the game for you, as the gameplay is very bare-boned with little to offer. But if you want to just sit down and have a little dose of feels, then To the Moon is the best game you can get.. Disclaimer: First impressions after 6 hours of gameplay.

This is the football sim that I've been looking for. Growing up I would play madden, but I rarely ever played any actual games (never felt like it was real football). The only aspect I liked was franchise mode.

Pros

- Very accurate sim stats
- Real life rosters (and the ability to edit team names)

- Simulation only takes seconds for an entire season (one of my only issues with OOTP 16, the long sim times)

Cons

- As other reviewers have stated, the UI from this game looks like it was made in the 90s.

- I'm not a fan of the way coaches are handled. (coach drafts every season, I'm not sure if there's a way around this and I missed it)

Overall, I would recommend this to anybody that wants an accurate NFL sim. The UI may be poor, but it doesn't hinder the experience too much. That being said, it will be frustrating to play until you get used to it. If you're willing to overlook the flaws there is much to like.

I love this great little game takes me back to my early years when games were basic and a certain amount of skill is involved. Like some of the games on steam library they mostly focus on one player this one is better played with two as I found it difficult to progress by myself, I highly recommend this game is played with a controller as somebody who has historically used keys even I struggled with the pace of the game without a control pad.

the pixel art is very typical anime, bright colours and wacky hairstyles to match, the music can be a bit repetitive particular if you get stuck on a level and have to hear the same tune over and over.

I can't comment much on the levels as I've probably only seen three the game play set out very similarly to a breakout or brick breakout style of gameplay, in which players have to break bricks in order to progress through the levels. story:9.5/10
character:9/10

system:8.5/10

at all:9/10. Amber BOOM is a really fun game. It is simple and challenging and therefore when you complete a level you honestly feel as if you earned it. I am very glad i got it 90% off from a coupon I got from crafting a badge. Good show.. awesome sound tracks!. Casual, relaxing and cute. Yay!. That is a very good shmup! Fast, fun, hard and addicting. It gets very messy after a few waves, and that is enjoyable if you like messy things. Arcade pleasure !. After play some hours now, i can recommend this game. Some pros and cons:

- The physics on game are well done. Everything is natural, if your ship is heavy and you want ramming little things, this go happen. If you make a "spear" with strong modules to ramming in the front, go work. If you make a little ship to be fast, this go happen. Overall the physics, the modules, everything, work very well.

Pros:

- A good variety of weapons, modules, missions and customization.

- I see some comments about not be a "polished" game. I cant agree. Is a solid game at moment.

- System wise, im playing in OSX with a "low-mid" system and the game is very light.

- TL:DR: You have a Stellaris galaxy map, and any system you enter, you have a RTS FTL customized by you to destroy the things, rescue people and everything else.

Cons (suggestions:)

- The lack of in-game customization to some simple controls on the hangar. I play on a notebook without the buttons to rotate the modules.

- Sometimes you have problems in indentify allies or enemys in battle. The colors (red/green) are not strong enough

- The game need something on galaxy map to identify traders, factions influence more easily.

Overall a nice buy if you want a mix between stellaris and a RTS FTL.
